Robby will deliver the critical information builders need today in order to sort out the several and inter-related energy performance and market-related issues.

Don't get caught behind the curve or the eight ball. Attend all three sessions!

Thursday August 26, End Builder Program Confusion: The many energy efficiency and green programs lead to confusion. End it here. Energy Star, Builders Challenge, LEED for Homes, NAHBGreen, etc., etc., etc. What are all these green programs and why would it make sense for a builder to align themselves with one or more of them? Come learn about each of the predominant building programs in the market and if one might fit your needs.

Thursday September 23, Performance Scopes of Work. Why you need them, how to create them. Building to meet the mandates of the 2009 International Energy Conservation Code, let alone to meet any one of the many builder programs available, requires that your trade partners clearly understand what you require of them. The best way to make this clear is in the scope of work document. However, the typical scope of work document rarely identifies the very items crucial to ensure code or program compliance. From design to construction, each trade needs to be told up front what is expected, and that they will be inspected. Properly drafted scopes of work can increase your success and reduce your risk.

Thursday October 28, Marketing Homes that Perform: It's not just about location and aesthetics anymore. The paradigm has shifted. Performance is the new granite and will out-shine such upgrades as a sales tool every time. If performance isn't built into the house from the start it can't be replaced later like counter tops can. What's behind the drywall matters more today than any other aspect of the house. You need to be able to demonstrate that to your home buyers, but how?
